The evaluation of a patient with the chief complaint of persistent or intractable hiccups can be a daunting process given the broad list of differential diagnoses to consider.